Blue Is The Water

I don't own the Digimon characters; that's Toei animation's job, and they can keep the profits.

>Blue Is the Water

Blue.

> It surrounds me everywhere
 The water, my death
> Your eyes, my life The balance of nature
 Until you upset that balance
> Or I did.
 I don't know who is the betrayer

I'm leaving you all; say goodbye
> Maybe you mean the good as in good riddance
 Or maybe it is only the mist in my eyes
> But the water is my friend. Like you once were

Was it fun, then, to betray me?
> To watch me burst into tears while you pretend to console me?
 You've hurt me more deeply than this liquid can
> For water is not so cold as ice

I'm stepping into the lake
> I don't feel it enclose my ankles, my waist
 You'll never know what I still feel for you
> For I'll not be here to say

I'm going under now You see me; I hear them yelling
> But I'm already gone
 Above you

I see you take a body from the lake
> But that is not me. I am here.
 I see those blue eyes fill with tears
> And see that just maybe, you did care

Too late
> I have crossed the barrier
 I am in another blue
> It is not your eyes, the tears, the water

I am in light. And the blue is what I feel.

>An: Hey, my first poem that didn't rhyme! I was so inspired by everybody else's poems that I wrote one of my own.
